8. Slow marches are all very good where there is inspection to be done, or jamabandi to be settled; but often it takes a long march to get to the locality where the work is to be done, & it is here that the usefulness of a swift means of travelling comes in. It is of course a great pain to Govt if a journey wh formerly took an entire day can be done in a few hours early in the morning or

9. A motor cycle will never enable a subordinate officer to dispense with his horse, or save him from wearing rides & tramps across country — but it will place it in his power to save for work which time which would have been wasted on the road.

10. With the development of work consequent on the all round increase in administrative activities, the date is past when a subordinate officer could afford the luxury of a leisured road journey

The Dy Commr will also see that the officer maintains a good riding conduct & that the motor cycle is not used so as to avoid other than roadside journeys.
